

The bridge

When I was writing song texts some time ago, I had an idea. Wouldn't it be nice to write an 'open and positive' song, have that song translated in all the languages of the world, and then invite musicians from all over the world to perform this song in their own way?

I wrote "The Bridge" and hereby present the song in the five most widely spoken languages in the world: Chinese, Spanish, English, Bengal and Hindi (The English version is the original). I invite you to translate the text into your own language and to share your musical elaboration with us. This can be done on YouTube, MySpace or in another way, preferably mentioning: thisisthebridge.

With this project I have no political, religious or financial intentions. It's all about "fun". Besides that I think that it's a good thing when people, also by a project like this, stay aware of the fact that despite all our differences we have a lot in common. Our love for music, for example.

In some cases it may be convenient to use each other's melodies and/or translations. I think it is best for the development of the project that we renounce from copyright.

Kind Regards,

Thé Bridge
